News from the Consulate

3/11 – 5 Years Later

Last month marked the fifth year anniversary of the devastating earthquake, tsunami, and nuclear disaster in Japan. March 11, 2011 is a day Japan definitely will not and cannot forget. Nearly 16,000 lives were lost, and whole cities were destroyed. Five years later, the Tohoku region still faces many issues stemming from that fateful day. Struggling local economies, an aging population, reconstructing schools and normalcy for children’s daily lives all make for a recovery that still has a long way to go.

But many who live on today remember the kindness and friendship shown to them in their time of need. Many cities in California held fundraisers or provided other support for their Japanese sister cities in the aftermath of the crisis. This is the power of sister city relationships. These enduring bonds between California and Japanese cities will continue to bring people closer together through the good times and the bad. Japan is still on its way to recovery, but it is always a fitting time to reflect on the overwhelmingly generous and compassionate responses from Japan’s sister cities in California during that difficult period.

Kawakami Watsonville Sister City Association – March 2016 Update

By Robb Mayeda, President, Kawakami Watsonville Sister City Association
(Edited for length)

The Kawakami Watsonville Sister City Association (KWSCA) thanks those community members for their attendance and support at “Kawakami Night” at Miyuki Restaurant (Feb. 9) and the flapjack breakfast fundraiser at Applebee’s (Feb. 21). Miyuki’s was well-attended, and several of our Kawakami-bound individuals came and tried their first Japanese food! KWSCA thanks Janet Sakaguchi for hosting “Kawakami Night” at Miyuki Restaurant and Esther Ura for arranging the Applebee’s event once again. Our 16 students and their families sold a new record number of 370 flapjack breakfast tickets, and the walk-in guests pushed the ticket sales over 400! The restaurant tried a new method of serving, and we did not have enough adults to serve everybody efficiently, so we thank you for your patience. Our students will be headed for Kawakami, Nagano-ken in May.

San Jose-Okayama Sister Cities Update

By Kathy Sakamoto, President, San Jose-Okayama Sister Cities
(Edited for length)

Our new board started off with a bang in November 2015 when a delegation from Okayama City government, the Convention Center, and Okayama University arrived in San Jose for the opening ceremony and symposium of the Okayama University Silicon Valley Office (OUSVO). Prof. Mototaka Senda, PhD is the Director of the OUSVO and also a director of San Jose-Okayama Sister Cities.

The short 4-day visit included a wonderful and interesting symposium of Okayama University research efforts in collaboration and partnership with San Jose State University and an open house at the OUSVO in Fremont.

Presidents of both universities attended the events, as well as San Jose City Councilmember for District 3, Raul Peralez, in his first official welcome of a major event. Consul General Yamada, Deputy Consul General Watanabe, and many more from the Japanese Consulate in San Francisco were present during these events.

The involvement of the City of Okayama was very welcome, as we had not had an official delegation in some time. International Affairs Manager for the City of San Jose, Joe Hedges, arranged a number of meetings and tours for the city representatives that included a tour of the Japanese Friendship Garden in Kelly Park. The tour was led by a Parks & Recreation ranger who had actively cared for the Momotaro Statue in downtown San Jose, the koi, and the gardens themselves. It was truly a pleasure to see the excitement of our guests while walking among the carefully groomed pathways. It is a place that we will revisit in preparation for and during our 60th Anniversary celebrations in 2017.

Of course, the meetings that were set up for our guests were also important and these included a meeting with Team San Jose (our Convention & Visitors Bureau), Matt Mahood, Executive Director of the San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce (SJSVCC), and last but not least, San Jose Mayor Sam Liccardo.

2017 marks the 60th year of the San Jose-Okayama sister city relationship, formed in 1957. Our new committee is working on Boy Scout and possibly Girl Scout exchanges, camping, and staff visits as a part of this celebration and as a part of an ongoing program. We hope to add to this artist exchanges, performances, university symposiums, high-tech visits and workshops, convention opportunities, tours on both sides of the Pacific, and much more.
